

Country Practices for the Organization of Data Collection: Case Studies

All National Statistical Offices and statistical sections of international organizations face their own unique challenges in the rapidly changing world of data collection, and each has devised innovative ways to tackle these challenges. This section of the wiki is designed to enable such organizations to share their experiences and in turn to learn from the experiences of others. We encourage you to create a country case study and to update it regularly.

To add a case study, you will need to be registered as a case study editor. Please contact us to request this.

Create Page

Unable to locate the desired parent page: Country Practices for the Organization of Data Collection:Case Studies

No fallback was set

In case of questions or technical difficulties in adding or editing a case study, please contact us.

List of Case Studies

- TurkStat (19 Nov, 2013 by Fiona Willis-Núñez)
- Description of Statistical Survey Processes in Slovenia (14 Mar, 2013 by Mojca No Razinger)
- Statistics New Zealand (13 Feb, 2013 by Amy White)

