

The Data Documentation Initiative (DDI): An Introduction for National Statistical Institutes

1) Basic Information

Training material title
The Data Documentation Initiative (DDI): An Introduction for National Statistical Institutes
Brief description and comments

A short paper designed to give an introduction to DDI for users within national statistical offices who may be unfamiliar with its purposes and uses. The paper aims "to characterize the flavors and uses of DDI, give some general background on the standards organization (the DDI Alliance), describe available tools, and relate the DDI to other initiatives and standards which are more familiar to this audience."

Written by Arofan Gregory for the Open Data Foundation.

Main category

Methodology of Data Collection, Processing, Dissemination & Analysis

2) Contact details and how to find the material

Author Organization(s)	Contact email address for this material (if applicable)	Date created
Open Data Foundation		July 2011
Location (links and/or attachments)
http://odaf.org/papers/DDI_Intro_forNSIs.pdf
No files have been attached to this page.

